Title: DRS Calls to Action: Pro's / Concerns

Author: MyLilPwny1404

Created 2022-02-15 20:49:30 UTC

Permalink: /r/GME/comments/stcyrb/drs calls to action pros concerns/

Url: https://www.reddit.com/r/GME/comments/stcyrb/drs_calls_to_action_pros_concerns/

Howdy All!

Just a regular ol' ape here wanting to bring a few questions, points, and discussion topics to light that I have surrounding DRS. I have kept out of really any engagement with people pushing DRS for the most part until today when I brought up a few questions on a "call to action" post. I could not get the answers and was told I couldn't be helped by the end of our discussion (not that apes fault in anyway, nothing but love). Anyways I want to say before I get into any questions or points I have that I fully respect each and everyone's investment styles, opinions and plans and in no way am I demanding, persuading or pushing you to do one thing or another. This is an open discussion and hell maybe someone can teach me a thing or two who knows.

- * Selling Shares
- * Currently you can only sell shares for max $215,000 in CS

With everyone talking about their "Floors" being in the 75 million range how is this going to affect you with your DRS'd shares? Are you trusting that CS will raise that limit once MO-ASS starts? Are you planning to just sell for that limit? You can also write in to sell for more I am told, although who is going to mail in a letter to sell their shares during MO-ASS? Currently I'm seeing DRS letters take weeks to months, this is a concern for me with anyone wanting to write in to sell.

- * "Call to action"
- * Prior to DRS any call to action was met with scrutiny and hate / criticism

I'm curious as to what new evidence has shown that DRS is the only catalyst for MO-ASS? I have been seeing people talk / push on all 3 of the subs saying unless everyone DRS then mo-ass wont happen. Is it that people have given up on the idea that the marketplace, turnaround and NFT world will drive the price up or do you not think the price will rise on its own? Can SHF kick the can indefinitely?

- * Brokers selling shares
- * I have heard talk that a broker will not fill your order if you are using them during MO-ASS.

This one baffles me as currently CS limit sells are at $215,000 per share, Although I can sell a Berk A share for $472,999.97 as of right now. So already double CS limit and proves a share can be sold for 450,000 + (Yes a long way off millions but still more than CS with evidence a stock trades at those levels). Yes I understand the whole Robinhood kerfuffle but CS will sell your shares through a broker as well. So if brokers aren't allowing selling of GME why would they allow CS to sell through them? Possibly to put a ceiling on the mo-ass of $215,000 per share? open to thoughts , just asking the hard questions is all.

That being said there are benefits as well. I do not want this to be an ANTI-DRS post. I genuinely want to shed light on concerns I personally have and I'm sure many others. DRS has turned into such a touchy subject that nobody will step out and ask hard questions or bring up a discussion that may not please the echo chamber.

So here's a few positives I see :

- * Shares in your name
- * Benefit of controlling what happens to your shares, and overall impact on exposing crime.

Absolutely nothing wrong with taking control of your own investments and holding the shares in your name. I see this as nothing but a positive and support it. This takes away from shares that possibly could be sold short and If/When (I have no doubt that apes will do this) the float is locked it will expose the wide spread crime of illegal short selling.

- * Goal Line / Checkpoint
- * I think the idea of locking the float allows for a "Checkpoint" to be set that people have something to look forward to or follow the progress.

I think people do need something to look forward to , have a goal in mind to hit when we venture into uncharted territory of a float being locked up. They can physically see a rough idea of their impact pursuing making the markets a better place which brings to the next point.

- * Locking the Float
- * I think this will be a huge achievement to not only expose what's behind the curtains but also shows the care and passion for making change from Retail. When has retail ever pushed this hard or dug this deep to expose the layers of crime?

Locking the float is no small achievement, this shows the drive retail has to expose the crime and illegal practices that plague our markets. Remember this isn't all about tendies, this cancerous short selling and illegal practices need to be exposed and shed light on. This will give concrete evidence to hold those accountable.

Anyways enough rambling on, I think there are pro's and cons to DRS'ing. I think the idea of DRS'ing shares you plan to hold through mo-ass makes a ton of sense. I think selling from CS will be a challenge and defeats the purpose of SHF buying back their shit IOUS if you sell from CS. Both DRS'ing and not DRS'ing have valid points and I see the benefits from each. Let me know your thoughts to my questions / concerns / points.

TL:DR

At the end of the day people should be researching what works best for them and not listen to people on the internet with how you should invest. NOBODY knows how this plays out and if they tell you they know, well I have a Nigerian price waiting to talk with you. Many questions and concerns on both sides, and a few questions / concerns I personally have. Open to creating a dialog between those that support DRS fully and those that are skeptical. Apes are strong together, share knowledge, thoughts, wrinkles and experience if youd like. We have people from all walks of life here.

As always this is not financial advice but a dialog for questions and opinions. And a few rockets for good measure. Please correct me if anything I said is incorrect as I want a discussion to FUD.

Unsure why i cannot say "Mo-ass" without the hyphen.. Interesting..