So they aired the special last night on msnbc called Diamond hands. Why does this give me the heebiejeebies? If the media has been trying to squash us the entire time and put us down then why all the sudden are they mainstreaming the movement and in a positive light? It feels like I'm being Sun Tzu'd. Are they amping up our movement so they can gain massive traction and profit on our losses because the powers that be won't let the event happen again? can they just halt the price every time it gains and darkpool sell it back down like we've seen this past week? This doesn't feel right to me. Why illuminate your weakness and give the tv population access to join the ranks of your competitor? I feel frustrated at this thought even though I'm behind GameStop all the way.

GameStop. GameStop. GameStop G
