Futures are down big.

Dow futures -2.2% S&P500; futures -2.2% Nasdaq futures -2.7% Cryptocurrencies bloodbath Gold broke $1917 last year reaction high & hit $1949 OIL probing $100

We speculated last year between February, March, April SHF hide their shorts via equity total return swap, portfolio equity swap, just like what Archegos did to hide and inflated their positions. Since then GME was taken off traditional borrowing scheme. What if those swaps typically not longer than 1-year forward swap are due for roll-over and because of recent DOJ's racketeering/rico investigation, SEC ruling on reporting equity swap and more importantly war in Ukraine deter counterparties from engaging in these swap transaction as market paring risky assets suddenly force fail-to-deliver miraculously blew up.

If SHF can't roll-over their swaps means they will need to cover their shorts. If retail not selling where are they going to get supplies?

With global market falling sharply across all asset class it will definitely trigger stop-losses and MarginCall •■. Especially, when market have not price in an invasion. Market was hoping for diplomacy and to reach some sort of verbal agreement to de-escalate. Even Ukraine didn't believe Russia will invade them. The sell-off just started and more pressures ahead.

This geopolitical risk potentially expose all GME's manipulation evidence swept under the rug, especially naked shorts hidden under swap deals might suddenly resurface.

Short-sellers are going to get ■■■ big time by Russia's Vladimir Putin.
