Title: GME IV has declined significantly. What are the implications?

Author: DMC25202616

Created 2021-09-28 20:40:30 UTC

Permalink: /r/DDintoGME/comments/pxfbel/gme iv has declined significantly what are the/

Url:

https://www.reddit.com/r/DDintoGME/comments/pxfbel/gme iv has declined significantly what are the/

HODL and Registered ape here.

I can't remember GME IV being this low.

The low IV on GME has definitely changed my strategy. With the lower premiums, it is no longer worth it for me to tie up capital by selling cash secured puts which is how I accumulated the majority of my shares. The premium I received for my sold puts was plowed directly into share buying, and now that buying power is drying up. Does anyone have insight into how the significant drop in IV impacts SHF option strategy for using options to avoid FTDs? Is the IV lower now because of a significant push by Apes to council each other against trading gme options? Is the lowering of IV part of short strategy or does it actually hurt SHFs by diminishing the premium received from the calls they sell? Would love to hear a good take from wrinkled apes.