Title: They need to try harder than this. Where do they even find these "journalists?" So, now GME is a "yolo" stock lol, when did we get upgraded from meme?

Author: sitdownbhumble8

Created 2022-02-23 09:53:56 UTC

Permalink: /r/GME/comments/szdpti/they_need_to_try_harder_than_this_where_do_they/

Url: https://i.redd.it/6kgv1t102kj81.jpg

With over 80% of investors in YOLO stocks being born in the late 1990s, their overconfidence in continued market growth is staggering, allowing them to take on leverage in the form of credits and debts to start investing in selected stocks. And though to is no actual asset class that could be termed YOLO, it pertains to companies that have posted immense gains and generated headlines during the pandemic lockdown period.

Among the most notable examples over 2020 to 2021 are AMC Entertainment (AMC), which skyrocketed by over 2,000% in just under a year, and GameStop (GME)– up 5,232% in the past year. Others in the league are Bed, Bath & Beyond (BBY) with 328% gains, Blackberry (BB) – 113% year-to-date, and others.

It all started in early 2021 with GameStop Corp. (GME), which saw its stocks boosted by a group of Reddit users who started investing in it and attracted others to do so. The price soared tenfold from $4 in 2020 to $350 in

