i knew enough to spot that the event of multiple brokerage houses halting buying was a sign of an historic event...of a severely stressed Wall Street, and the following downward price movement struck me as "contrived". I went at them bravely/ courageously....the drum-beat of logic, analysis, and encouragement synched with my own internal "reasoning"....became a huge position for me...and very soon down 50%...i didn't have any concerns...now, up quite nicely, and still, "no shakes". Our Ace in the Hole is that RC is advancing the company...expanding its prospects...astutely handling its finances...endearing himself to the company's sharehodlers and customers...so, there is a "fundamental" story that justifies the price...i note that Amazon, to my knowledge, was not profitable for the first 10 years, but reached or nearly reached a trillion dollar market cap. That is a selling-point that has not been explored/told.

(K. Griffin's recent PR-campaign, and the activities of others was not only to assuage the "fears" of their capitalinvestors, but was to stem the possibility of a 2nd tribe of Apes emerging from the Jungle). That KG exited from his Chicago HQ is a metaphorical "retreat"...he is on his back-heels, however one looks at it (imo).
