DRS is truly the way. Some anti-DRS folks on SS are using poor/nefarious logic to poke holes into it and pretend it does nothing:

- * Ex 1. Computershare (CS) uses a broker so your shares aren't any safer there
- * **CS holds shares in your name. Brokers have no access to your shares until given specific instructions. If a broker liquidation or general fuckery causes street name shares to be sold without permission, THAT MEANS THEY NEED SHARES. There is no logical sense to believe they will block any sells coming from CS**
- * Ex 2. DRS 100% won't prove trading volume is fraud because you can sell and buy from CS
- * **This is just nuts. Selling from CS is high cost and any moderate volume is not coming from CS. Gamestop and CS have full access to the register (name, # shares owned) to know what remains constant day to day. CS knows exactly how many buys/sells are occurring through their platform**
