Why is it important for GME if it's another stock? We are all about GME, but these are in the basket of stocks shorted significantly in 2020 that weren't closed and have similar ownership patterns.

Also, if these guys rip then the SHFs get margin called just the same and GME goes to the moon.

Also, it lays out a possible strategy for GME to follow.

AAAAaaaannnd it shows that 'similar' stocks have a much higher % of shares sold short than is being reported.

GME to the moon.

EDIT 1: Adding in the short interest names from Fintel - I don't have access to the numbers and they don't really matter. More it shows that GME's usual suspects are also short on these guys as well for people questioning the underlying 'basket' part.

Edit 2:
Institutional owners according to Fintel. Total shares are 16m so would need 5m here outside of the Dillard's listed to lock the float...
